Balsamic Vinegar

Balsamic vinegar is made from the concentrated juice, or "must," of certain grape varieties, typically Trebbiano and Lambrusco grapes. The must is boiled down to a thick syrup called "saba," which is then fermented and aged in wooden barrels for an extended period, often for several years or even decades. During this aging process, the vinegar develops its distinctive flavors, including a complex sweetness and acidity, as well as notes of wood from the barrels. True balsamic vinegar, often labeled as "traditional" or "DOP" (Denominazione di Origine Protetta), undergoes strict regulations and quality standards in its production, ensuring authenticity and excellence. We carry a variety of balsamic vinegars, including the options below.
